

Watch it

Located in a Brookline storefront (1393 Beacon Street), where you can watch sweets being made right before your eyes, Serenade Chocolatier carries on the traditions of veteran candy-maker "Uncle Bill" Federer, a fixture in Coolidge Corner for more than 48 years. Federer still stops by to help dip the store's 40-plus varieties, including a perfectly sinful buttercrunch. Prices range from $1.50 for a single truffle to $35 for a molded chocolate piano (pictured here). Serenade has a second store, in South Station, Boston.
